

Preparing For Research Showcase

Weekly Report 16- 1/7 to 1/13

This past week, preparation for the Research Showcase was my main focus and priority. This meant creating the display board, finalizing my Original Work, and updating both the digital portfolio and hand held portfolio.

As the last meeting with my client for my Original Work occurred, I was able to complete the final revisions necessary and was able to complete the layout of the custom home. However, even after finishing the floorplan, a realization that I still had a lot more work ahead took place. I had to make sure that everything followed the Texas regulations and codes. Once this happened, some changes had to be made, but it eventually was finished.

Although the Original Work ran pretty smoothly, trouble occurred when the display board started being created. First, there were no trifolds in the color gray, then misplacement of letters and titles was made, but, finally, I was able to get it all done on time.

Now that all this preparation is made, my nerves and anxiety for the Research Showcase are starting to disappear. I am looking forward to seeing my mentor as well as interacting with different professionals and other ISM students. Next week, hopefully, a decision will be made regarding what should be made/done for my Final Product.
